Pocono Mountains Maintains Promise for Winter, New Year

Region looks to continue vigilance through colder months

December 2, 2020 – With the arrival of winter weather, the need to redouble efforts to mitigate the spread of COVID-19 is vitally important to everyone in the Poconos as well as those who visit. That is why the Pocono Mountains Visitors Bureau (PMVB) and its many community partners and members are committed to upholding the Pocono Promise over these critical winter months.

The Pocono Promise was developed to ensure businesses and organizations commit to the highest degree of public health safety. So far, roughly 300 businesses and counting have pledged to do what's right ranging from proper sanitization, physical distancing guidelines and temperature checks for employees and guests to name a few. Ski resorts in the Poconos are taking extra precautions in preparation for the new season.

And it is not just the hospitality industry taking measures to ensure the Poconos stays open and remains a healthy, safe destination but also everyday businesses including doctors' offices and local governments.

"The Pocono region flattened the curve once and must take the appropriate steps to keep us all healthy amidst this early winter spike," said Pennsylvania Department of Health Secretary Dr. Rachel Levine. "We applaud the efforts of those who continue to keep the Promise and help us to protect one another. By working together, we can stop the spread of this virus."

Thanks to relationships forged at the outset of the pandemic, the PMVB and health care systems in the Poconos have continued to inform the public of the importance of masking and limiting exposure to others over the holiday season. The result has been a public service announcement campaign consisting of digital and broadcast elements designed to educate and ultimately save lives.

"We are blessed to have such widespread participation in the efforts to maintain the highest degree of public health safety across the Pocono Mountains," said PMVB President/CEO Chris Barrett. "The job is not complete. As the virus surges, we need to take every measure necessary to continue to put the health and welfare of families first."

A list of businesses that have signed the Pocono Promise can be found here. Businesses have signs and flyers posted at their entrances as well. Before traveling to or from Pennsylvania, please follow the Pennsylvania Department of Health's latest guidance located here.
